COURT NEWS

The October term of Supreme Judicial Court of Oxford County finished its work on Friday after a busy session of ten days.

In the case of Berkeley vs. Plaisted and Isley which was for malpractice and expenses incurred the plaintiff was awarded a verdict of $1,000 with the sum of $272 for expenses incurred. The story of the case was that Ernest T. Berkeley, son of Rev. and Mrs. William Berkeley of Sumner, while on a bicycle had the misfortune to collide with an automobile driven by Dr. John M. Plaisted, in which he was very badly injured. He was taken to his home in an insensible condition, and Dr. Plaisted assumed his care. The boy had been in the house but a short time when Dr. Harry Isley came in. Dr. Isley did not come as a physician, but as a neighbor. Dr. Plaisted was in a very nervous state and he asked Dr. Isley to administer first aid to the boy which he did, sewing up a cut in his head, bandaging his left leg which was punctured and administering a stimulant for his heart. After this treatment Dr. Isley disappears from the case.

The boy remained at home for five weeks, and, as he did not improve, he was sent to a hospital.

The point of contention was that, according to Rev. and Mrs. Berkeley, Dr. Plaisted said no bones were broken and that there was no need to send him away or to obtain other medical assistance. Dr. Plaisted and his witnesses on the other hand maintained that he urged the boy being sent to a hospital. When the boy was taken to the hospital it was discovered one leg was broken, and that there was fracture in the pelvis.

After examination Dr. Isley was eliminated from the case, and Dr. Plaisted became sole defendant.

The next case was—Elmer Bailey vs. William P. M. Braun & Sons, Inc. This was a case of an unsettled account.

It seems the defendants carry on lumbering operations in the Maine woods. They operate a mill in Newry, or did in the fall of 1919. Mr. Bailey is a contractor, and contracted on this particular year to cut over a certain mountain and deliver the logs at the defendant's mill. His understanding was that the logs were to be delivered in log lengths. There was a certain portion of the top of the mountain that was swampy, so the logs could not be hauled until the surface froze, and in order to keep his men at work secured permission to junk the logs up as this had to be done after the logs arrived at the mill. When a settlement was attempted it was alleged the defendant claimed the junking a part of the contract. The whole amount of the contract was $2,519.35. The amount that had been paid was $1150, leaving a balance of $1369.35 unsettled. This was the point arrived at when court adjourned for the day. During the night a settlement was arrived at, and the case was taken out of court.

Edward M. Creal of Rumford, indicted for carrying concealed weapon, was placed on probation and ordered to report to John H. Dennis, probation officer of Oxford County, on the last Saturday of each month.

Clifford Reil of Rumford, indicted for malicious mischief, was brought into court, placed on probation, and ordered to report to John H. Dennis, on the last Saturday of each month, the indictment to continue during good behavior.

Charles Silver of Woodstock, a boy of some eighteen years, who had been indicted for assault on C. R. Wilson of that town, appeared in court and pleaded guilty to the indictment. Alton C. Wheeler appeared for him. The circumstances of the case were briefly presented by County Attorney Dyer.

Mr. Wheeler, the county attorney, was not asking for a jail sentence. Justice Denney imposed a fine of $50 and costs taxed at $20, which was immediately paid.

The case of Dominique Girondi of Rumford who was charged with illegal possession of intoxicating liquor intended for sale, was next. Evidence for the State was given by Sheriff Harry A. Cole, and Deputy Sheriffs L. L. Niles, Philip J. Lestard and Harry O. Stinson, who, on the 14th of May visited Girondi's place and found a keg containing several gallons of beer, a five gallon jug of beer, and a pork barrel full of home brew mash. The case was speedily disposed of, the jury returning with a verdict of guilty. He was fined $100 and costs of $2.

Following the Girondi trial, the last civil case on which a jury trial was asked was opened. This was a suit brought by Frederick L. Ray of North Waterford against the E. I. DuPont de Nemours Co. for damages caused by the flooding of plaintiff's land by a dam built by the defendant company.

SHOOTING ACCIDENTS

On Thursday afternoon of last week while going through the woods to the camp of Tom Logan in Greenwood to have a saw filed Mr. Donald McDonald was accidentally shot by George Hadaikin. Mr. McDonald had a bag of apples over his shoulder and had stooped down to tie his shoe string when the Hadaikin boy saw him and thinking it was a deer fired, the shot hitting McDonald in the legs. He is as comfortable as can be expected at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Cummings.

Last Friday morning while out tending his traps Mr. Winfield Howe suffered a painful accident. In some way the gun was discharged the shot taking off the end of one finger and other shots lodging in his arm.

While examining a revolver one day the first of the week Charlie Gorman was accidentally shot through the hand.

A serious hunting accident occurred about one mile west of Kennebago station on Monday about 5.30 P. M. in which Mr. George V. Robinson, a section man employed by the Maine Central lost his right foot. Mr. Robinson in company with Raymond Bartlett, started out after game at 4.30 P. M. As it grew dusk, each started towards home up the railroad track, Robinson some distance in the lead, and of course, unbeknown to the other man, Robinson stopped outside of the road-way to set a trap for mink, when Bartlett, some distance away saw the movement and assumed it was a deer and fired, the bullet striking Robinson in the heel of the right foot, plowing its way through, shattering the foot badly.

Aid was soon gotten, and the injured man moved into Kennebago. Dr. Brown and Dr. Coburn were summoned from Bangor, making quick time to Kennebago. After examination they decided the man should be taken to Rumford Hospital as quickly as possible. In the meantime, arrangements were being made for a special train for the purpose, and as soon as the doctors reports was received, the train got under way, landing the injured man at the McCarty Hospital at 10.50 P. M., where he was operated upon.

MISS CATHERINE GROVER

Miss Grover was the daughter of Peter and Almira Mason Grover and was born March 3, 1839. She and her twin sister Cathleen, who survives her were the last of a family of ten children.

Miss Grover was one of the converts in the great Hammond revival in 1862 and with her twin sister, Cathleen, who alone of her immediate family survives her, united with the Congregational church at that time.

She has always been loyal to her church, never being absent from its services when health and circumstances permitted attendance. She was a faithful and devoted Sunday school teacher of the little ones for many years.

Much missed by many who have had to care for her and her sister in recent years and especially in the failing health of recent months, she has passed on to meet the dear ones who preceded her.

The funeral service was at the chapel of the church she loved so well Tuesday morning, Oct. 19, Rev. W. C. Curtis officiating.

Interment was in the old cemetery above the Steam Mill.

ENOUGH FOR EVERYBODY

The reports covering the farms and the industrial situation of the country show very clearly that the country is getting back to normal production, and that we will soon have enough to go around it is good logic that this condition will make toward cheaper prices. There are a great many instances that bear out this theory. While the time has evidently arrived when the competition among dealers for goods at any price and among employers for laborers at any wage has passed, it does not necessarily follow that there have been any revolutionary changes in values. The result is that the profiteers have less chance to sell their goods at unreasonable prices, while the jack-of-all-trades can no longer buy a hammer and a saw and demand ten dollars a day as a carpenter skilled in his work. Apparently it is a sorry business for merchants in many lines to dispose of goods they have purchased at inflated prices at the new figures that are being found to be reasonable.

The most graphic instance in this connection surrounds sugar. The local merchants have made an awful fuss about accommodating themselves to the new conditions and the new prices, even though the loss was slight. "Poor little Cuba," has grown so rich out of sugar profiteering during the war that its sugar growers are in the doldrums because the consumers of sugar in the United States and elsewhere have forced down their prices. One of the largest Cuban banks has suspended operations, and the rich Islanders are just now realizing that their holiday is over. On a less exaggerated scale these same conditions exist in a great many industries throughout the United States. Nevertheless, it must not be inferred that the pre-war prices will be restored. Mr. Ford, with his fifty or sixty million dollars profits each year is doubtless able to sell "flippers" at the old price while paying the new wages of wages to his employees, and he can still keep out of the poorhouse. Other automobile manufacturers may do the same thing, but in most of the industrial lines, and in agriculture, this policy will be impossible.

It is obvious that the new readjustment is well under way, and the fact is being rapidly accomplished. It is just as clear that it will not be predicated on the plan which is plausible for Mr. Ford and a few manufacturers like him who made abnormal profits both before and during the war period.

HYDROELECTRIC POSSIBILITIES

It has been shown that a great power system drawing its electrical energy from steam and water generation, would save 30,000,000 tons of coal annually, representing $150,000,000, the labor of more than 30,000 miners and the release of vast railroad carrying capacity for other freight. Such a project Washington to Boston and drawing its electrical energy from steam and water generation, is the design of the Government, which is developing plans to meet the new era in power development which it is thought will result from the water power legislation passed at the last session of Congress.

Some men say that it is almost unbelievable that a progressive people like those in the United States should cling to methods that are as antique as the ox cart, by insisting upon digging and transporting coal, and robbing Mother Earth of all her natural mineral resources, when all that is needed is the development of waterpowers on streams which for centuries have awaited development.

THE GREAT LAKES PROJECT

For more than twenty five years people along the Great Lakes have been agitating a waterway through the St. Lawrence to the Ocean Canada is thoroughly in accord with the project and has made extensive developments of the river to permit its use by vessels drawing twenty-five feet or more of water. The project has not been very active in late years though it is the subject of pending legislation in Congress. If opposition is the life of endeavor there may be something doing that will put the waterway project in the foreground. A plan has been worked out for a series of canals to make the lakes to ocean route an exclusively American project. It appears in some quarters that New York State regards the St. Lawrence route as inimical to the Erie Canal. Other broad-minded people say that eventually the St. Lawrence route and the waterway through United States territory will both be developed. From an engineering standpoint neither scheme is as difficult as was the building of the Panama Canal. From the head of the Great Lakes there are comby local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a running, itching or watery ear, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

We will give $1000 to any case of deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Dr. J. C. Kennedy, & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

GRASSHOPPERS AND THEIR RELATIVES

A State of Maine Survey by the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station

The Orthoptera include those common insects the grasshoppers, crickets, and katydids, and the less frequently seen cockroaches, walking sticks, and carwigs.

Over seventy kinds have been captured in the State of Maine and it is probable that additional species remain to be discovered here. All but fifteen of the seventy feed upon plant tissue chiefly to the grass, grain, and garden and are directly injurious to vegetation, crops of the farmer, some of them, indeed, being in the front rank of insect pests.

These insects are constantly with us, causing local injuries of greater or less extent every year, and when several years favorable to their development pass by, widespread and serious damage is done.

In consequence of these facts the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station plans to issue at an early date a bulletin relating to the insects of this group which are found in the State. This bulletin is to be prepared by Mr. Albert P. Morse, curator of the zoological museum of Wellesley College and curator of natural history at the Peabody Museum of Salem, Mass., a specialist on the group, who has recently monographed the New England species. Mr. Morse has spent several months in the State in their study at various times, including a considerable portion of the past summer, and is therefore well acquainted with the insects and the conditions under which they are found here.

The past season with its frequent rains has been favorable to the growth of crops and less favorable to the development of grasshoppers, which thrive best in droughty years, consequently they have been less abundant and the damage done by them less noticeable this summer than in 1918 and 1919. They are, however, always present in injurious numbers, especially on sandy soils in the southwestern part of the State.

Four species in particular are notoriously destructive, having repeatedly done severe damage in various parts of the country. In the season just past several instances of injury to garden crops were reported in this State, and one case of complete defoliation of a young apple orchard set in grass-land.

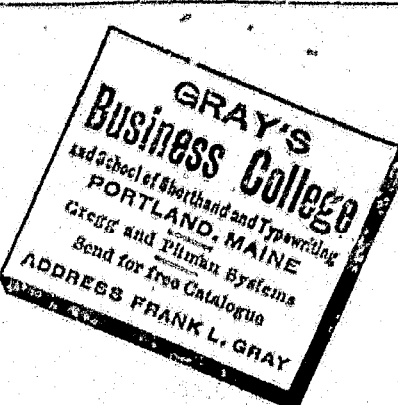

to Massachusetts and New York.

The Carroll-Jellerson Co. shoe factory shut down on Wednesday of last week to await orders.

The box shop of the C. B. Cummings & Sons Co. is shut down on account of lack of orders.

The Norway Shoe Co. will resume work Nov. 1 after a short shut down. Misses Elizabeth and Agnes Bond, who have been at W. C. Leavitt's during the summer, have gone to the home of Judge Wm. F. Jones for the winter.

L. B. Seashons is clerking at the Noyes drug store.

Given two or three years favorable to their multiplication and any one of them or all together become serious enemies of the farmer.

The best protection against their ravages is a sharp watch kept in May and June. (hatching-time) and the prompt application of poisoned bran mash if they are found in dangerous numbers.

Make a clipping of this article and keep it where it will be at hand next season. If the grasshoppers appear in your fields these directions if followed will prevent disaster to crops.

FORMULA

Bran, 20 lbs.
Paris green, 1 lb.
Syrup (common glucose syrup, 2 qts.
Oranges or Lemons, 3 fruits
Water, 3 1-2 gallons
(Caution. Do not water until the day the mash is to be used.)

Preparation and Distribution
Mix the bran and Paris green thoroughly in a wash tub while dry. Squeeze the juice of the oranges or lemons into the water, and chop the remaining pulp and the peel to fine bits and add them to the water. Dissolve the syrup in the water and wet the bran and poison with the mixture, stirring at the same time so as to dampen the mash thoroughly.

The bait when flavored with orange or lemon was found to be not only more attractive but also more appetizing, and thus was eaten by more of the grasshoppers.

The damp mash or bait should be sown broadcast in the infested areas early in the morning, or about the time the grasshoppers are beginning to move about from their night's rest. It should be scattered in such a manner as to cover five acres with the amount of bait made by using the quantities of ingredients given in the above formula. Since very little of the bran mash is eaten after it becomes dry, scattering it broadcast in the morning, and very thinly, places it where the largest number will find it in the shortest time. Sowing it in this manner also makes it impossible for birds, barnyard fowls, or live stock to secure a sufficient amount of the poison to kill them. Inasmuch as the poisoned bait does not act quickly, it will be from two to four days before the grasshoppers are found dead, and these will be more numerous in sheltered places. It does not require much of the poison to kill them. Even a small flake will be sufficient to cause death.

MOTHER WISDOM

Shall Our Children Play with the Neighbors' Children?

Helen Johnson Keyes

Some mothers are gravely afraid of child-companionship for their children. Their fears are reasonable. The contagious diseases, measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough and others, which we have learned to understand as harmful and dangerous are spread through the contact of child with child. Also, children are especially quick to imitate the slang and the rough habits which mark young people of less careful bringing up.

What can we do about it? Do you remember Tennyson's poem of the man who built a lordly palace for his soul? After he had dwelt in it for a time, his soul began to dwindle so that in order to keep any soul at all, he had to leave his lordly palace and come out among the world of men.

So it is with our children. They must live in the world. In order to have sympathies, powers of adjusting their ways to other persons' ways, powers of standing up for their rights as well as to develop the sense of justice and generosity often to yield their pleasure for the benefit of their friends, they must have companionship with children of their own ages.

This can scarcely begin too young. The gain will be greater than any gain which could result from the cowardly policy of isolation.

Mothers also need the education of seeing their children with other children. It teaches us that our youngsters are neither better nor worse than most of our neighbors' children and that if we have cause to complain to Mrs. Adams of the behavior of her boy, Mrs. Burns has equal reason to complain to us of the manners of our girl.

As the good training of families depends largely on the education of parents, this side of the question is really important. The mother of an only child frequently regards her pet as superior to other children. In truth, an only child often is more developed and more mannerly than members of large households, who, necessarily, receive less individual care. But it is not good for this only darling to become aware of the fact.

It is equally true and equally injurious, that very busy mothers often regard their boys and girls as more unruly and unmannerly than those of other families. This may be unjust; it may give the children a feeling that they are not loved, that they are unfairly criticized and consequently implant in them a resolve to override authority and assert independence.

Children have an exceedingly correct sense of justice and they resent fiercely and righteously any betrayal of it. Parents need to keep this in mind. If these impatient mothers will watch their neighbors' children, they will probably find, repeated in them, the behavior of their own.

They will then understand that these traits are common to childhood and must be controlled by gentle measures and by an example of courtesy, patience and reasonableness in the home life.

Children learn most quickly by imitation. They reflect the manners and morals of their homes whereas they may be very little influenced by common sayings and rules which are conveyed purely by word of mouth and not reinforced by example.

So, for the sake of the moral development of the children and for the sake of our education as parents, let us open our gates to the healthy, normal children of the neighborhood.

You will notice the limitation: to the healthy, normal children. The strictest quarantine against illness is not too strict. Country teachers and country parents have much to think about in this direction.

The common cold in the head is often the beginning of a contagious disease, and children suffering from it should not play with other children. Sharing towels and drinking cups is a means of spreading infections of a most serious nature.

Let us make companionship, which is of such great importance morally, as nearly safe as possible by insisting on quarantine against the first indications of illness and by avoiding the use of common of eating and drinking utensils and toilet articles. Only ignorance and careless selfishness can consider such precautions discourteous.

The normal child! These are, unfortunately, children with perverted minds and evil habits against whom a mother must very carefully guard her children.

One such child will sometimes corrupt the young people of an entire neighborhood. There are, alas, more of these children than it is pleasant to believe and for this reason every mother should know her children's playmates. This she can do by inviting them to her house or on picnics.

The child who is absent-minded, inattentive, unobservant, slow in play, who considers himself different from other children and badly treated by them, should be held under suspicion till proved innocent. The fact that his people are among the best in the community, does not alter probabilities, for this evil creeps in everywhere.

The fact that he is still almost a baby, five or six years old, does not make our fear unreasonable, for bad habits may begin in infancy; and if the suspected one is not a ho at all but a girl, the evidence against her is equally strong, for this evil is even more frequent among little girls than little boys. The hardest possibility to face is the chance that it is our boy or our girl, but this should not make us less careful and honest in our observations or less truthful and brave in facing the findings.

It will be easier to bear if we remember that the sins which children commit are often scarcely sins to them. Their results, if we allow them to continue, may be ruin but that does not mean that the children themselves understand their acts to be evil with anything like the clearness with which they appear evil to us.

Many ruinous habits are started innocently and our attitude toward our little transgressors should not be one of punishment for what has already occurred but an unceasing watchfulness and quiet patience in setting them on the right path for the future.

The first step should be to consult a doctor, for a slight surgical operation will sometimes accomplish a cure although in most cases it must be supplemented by a long and constant watchfulness and days full of moderately hard physical work and out-of-door play.

These boys and girls must be kept apart from other children, and parents should train themselves to recognize their manners and appearance.

We should certainly not consider that mother wise who denied her children milk because some milk is not fresh and some seeds are tubercular. She must find a way of securing a clean supply. This is equally the case with companionship. It is not enough to keep away from our children things which are harmful; we must give them also what is good and nourishing to their characters.

There are some mothers, I confess, who seem to me very conceited and foolishly sentimental—who feel that only they are pure and wise enough to watch over the unfolding of their children's characters. Of course a mother is the sacred guardian of her children but there are many persons in the world besides herself who may do them good, many homes besides hers from which they may derive benefit. One of the duties of her guardianship is to bring them into contact with these persons and these homes.

Every woman with children of her own has responsibilities toward other children. Motherhood is larger than our own families and it is our duty to unlock the pleasures and blessings which surround us and to gather in the children of other women, too. Let our children play with children.

THE TEACHER'S OPPORTUNITY

By William Mather Lewis, Director Savings Division, Treasury Department

The strength of the United States depends upon the practical patriotism and sound economic thought of her future citizens. These characteristics must be developed in the daily life of the school.

Economists agree that the universal adoption of habits of intelligent saving will strengthen our nation tremendously. When every wage earner has a reserve fund of money the country will be sound economically, socially, politically.

The teacher who encourages pupils to earn money and to invest in Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps is doing much for their economic strength and practical patriotism.

Each child who buys stamps feels a partnership in the government; learns the wisdom of investing his money in securities that are absolutely safe; becomes familiar in a practical way with compound interest; and as he sticks stamp after stamp upon the card he has a visual demonstration of how savings grow.

Faith without works is dead. Thrift without safe investment such as Government Saving Securities, is robbed of its benefits. Its virtues lies not only in its principles but in the actual practice of investment.

Each year thousands of boys and girls in the United States are deprived of a college education because they lack money.

You can remedy this situation among your pupils by starting them on the road to saving early in life and encouraging them to safeguard these savings in Government securities.

You are rendering a real service to your country by promoting the sale of these stamps. The burden of war debt still is heavy and the government must still borrow money.

Add to your influence as a teacher. Promote sound economic thought, practical patriotism and prosperity by encouraging your pupils in the regular purchase of Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps.

CENTRAL MAINE POWER COMPANY NEWS

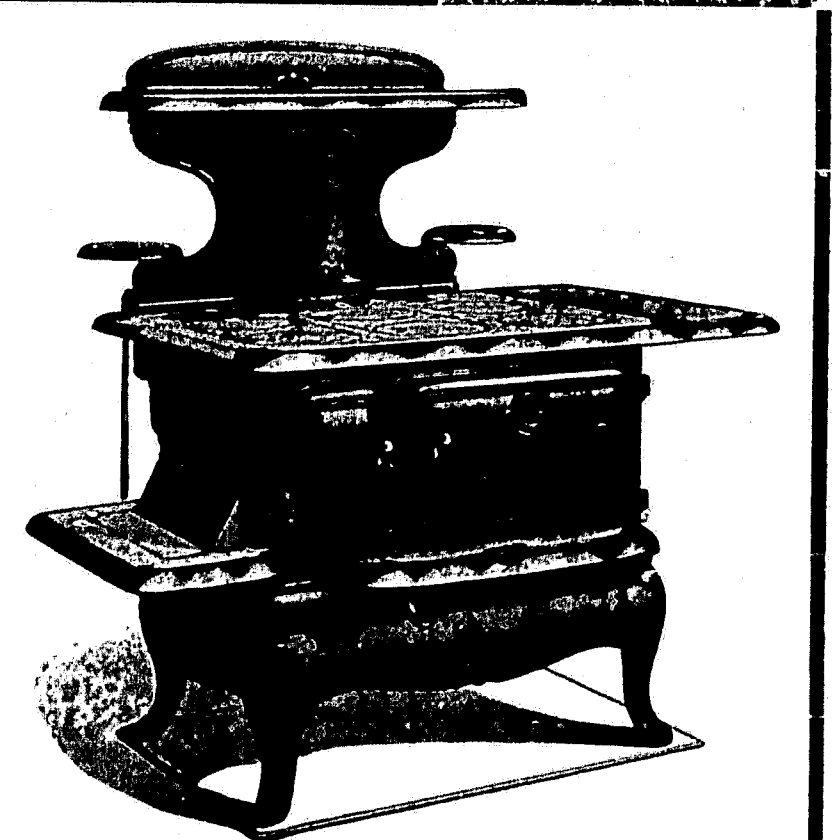

The determination of the Central Maine Power Company to give its customers high grade, uninterrupted electric service, is again emphasized by the Company's construction of a new, high tension, 33,000-volt line from Skowhegan to Guilford, a distance of approximately 35 miles.

The old high tension line goes from Waterville through Pittsfield, Corinna, Guilford, etc., to Greenville Station, the northern point of the Company's system. Because this is a single power line, any break or trouble immediately throws off all power in the towns beyond the break until repairs are made.

It is to offset this condition that the new line is being built. When it is completed, power will be thrown through both the new and the old lines. A break anywhere along either line will simply mean that a small section of a few miles will be cut off. Power flowing through the two high tension lines will insure electricity for all the towns except one that may be within the cut-off section.

The new line will not only act as "power insurance" for the towns served through it, but it will also tend to improve and maintain steadily the voltage in that district.

Its use will not increase the revenue of the company by so much as one penny. It is just a part of their endeavor to give good service. It is expected that this line will be finished before winter shuts in.

WOOD ALCOHOL

Practical steps are being taken to modify and eventually eliminate the danger of wood alcohol poisoning from beverages, says the Maine Department of Health. The first step has been taken by one manufacturing concern which controls practically 80 per cent of the output in the United States. Their product is now known as Menthacool, thus eliminating from the lay mind any connection with an alcoholic beverage.

The experienced mother knows that she cannot send her child to school in exactly the same clothes that have

RUBENIC PLAQUE

With the outbreak of the bubonic plague in several cities in this country, health workers everywhere are waging a destructive campaign against rats. The Maine Department of Health is giving warnings to Maine communities, not only along the coast but inland as well, that the rat alone is a carrier of the disease and that a fight to the finish should be made to kill the pest and to make all Maine buildings rat-proof. No epidemic of the bubonic plague is evidenced in Maine but the way to be sure that this scourge of Eastern countries does not break among us is to wage war against the rat population of our cities and Curtains and Decorations Which Will Add to Attractiveness of the Space.

In almost every home there are bay windows that perplex the home decorator. There is the round bay window, for example, which requires something more than glass curtains, and yet, because of the closeness of the windows, will not stand elaborate over-hangings. We have two curved rods fitted around the top of the sashes, one for the glass curtains, the other for the heavier hangings. On the inner one hang net and fine muslin curtains, being careful not to have fullness enough to produce bulging effect. A narrow width of over-drapery, connected by a straight gathered or platted valance, should hang at each end, stopping at the sill. A window seat may be upholstered in an overdrapery material.

Square bays are more difficult. Unless the projecting space is large enough to admit heavy hangings gracefully, they should not be attempted at an individual window. A better plan is to frame the opening of this bay with a single pair of side draperies connected by a valance, just as though were a wide door opening. A group of windows may often be similarly treated.

By WILLIAM M. THACKERAY

Condensation by Charles K. Bolton,
Librarian of the Boston Athenaeum

William Makepeace Thackeray, son of a civil servant in India, was born July 18, 1811, in Calcutta. He died Dec. 24, 1863, in London, where most of his life was spent. From 1840 on his wife was insane, so there lived in his heart, as in that of the other great humorist of his time, Dickens, constant sorrow.

fortune. But he had bought experience invaluable to the young journalist, pricelessly to the novelist.

Thackeray's astonishing versatility was early realized. He aspired to illustrate Dickens's novels; he wrote travel sketches, stories, ballads and burlesques.

"Harry Lyndon," his first notable novel, was the history of a racial; but, in the most of the most feminine racial, he showed Sharp, Thackeray's first heroine. He backed Sharp, Thackeray's first heroine. He showed Sharp, Thackeray's first heroine. He showed Sharp, Thackeray's first heroine.

Thackeray reluctantly to the lecture field. His course on Eighteenth Century Literature in England and America (1851), prepared the ground for his (1852), his unsurpassed historical novel. "The Newcomers" (1854), "The Virgin Duval" (1856), and the unfinished Dennis (1857) complete the list of his best novels.

"My good young man, I think it is time you were off." Lady Kew said to Clive with great good humor. "I have been to see that poor little creature to whom Captain Helzle behaved so cruelly. She does not care a fig for him—not one fig. She is engaged, as you know, to my grandson Barnes; in all respects a most eligible union; and Ethel's engagement to my grandson, Lord Kew, has long been settled. When we saw you in London we heard that you too were engaged to a young lady in your own rank of life—Miss Mackenzie."
